4.26.2 smoking (U1/2)

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Smoking, p. 1112 (Project)
Name	smoking (U1/2)
Title	-
Description	Tobacco/smoking U1/U2, version dated 12 October 2018. The modular questionnaire design allows study participants great flexibility in providing quantitative information. These options are readily accepted, but require time-consuming data preparation. The use of the raw questionnaire data for analysis purposes is therefore not recommended. Instead, the derived variables in abg_tabak should be used. The degree of completeness of the data is good overall. The questions on the use of e-cigarettes etc. (only asked in the baseline from April 2017 and not of ex-smokers) and shisha (only asked from the second examination onwards) have yet to be analysed. Baseline data checked in the QA reports NAKO-124 (DF100k) and NAKO-608 (DF200k).

4.27.1.1 1. usual bedtimes

(1) Die Zeitangaben erfolgen in „Minuten nach Mitternacht“. Eine Zubettgehzeit von 22:00 hat entsprechend den Wert 1320. Beachten Sie dabei: Eine Zubettgehzeit von 00:20 liegt im Folgetag (relativ zu dem in der Itemformulierung angesprochenen „Abend“) und wird als 20+1440 = 1460 kodiert, entsprechend eine Aufstehzeit von 08:00 Uhr als 1920 (Transposition der Werte 0:00 bis 15:00 um 24 h /1440 min). (2) Da Zubettgehzeit, Aufstehzeit und deren Differenz („Time in Bed“) voneinander abhängen, werden sie bei der Plausibilitätsprüfung gemeinsam betrachtet, d.h. nur wenn alle drei Parameter in jeweils als plausibel definierten Korridoren liegen, werden die Eingaben insgesamt als plausibel betrachtet. Die einzelnen Korridore konnten dadurch unter Berücksichtigung der Verteilung der Rohdaten recht großzügig festgelegt werden, was angesichts einer weiten Streuung der Schlafgewohnheiten in der Bevölkerung auch sinnvoll ist (Zubettgehzeit 18:00 bis 08:59 Uhr, Aufstehzeit 01:00 bis 18:00 Uhr, Bettzeit 120 bis 960 min). (3) Einige Probanden haben bei der Eingabe der Einschlafzeit offensichtlich entgegen der Absicht des Eingabemoduls die 12-Stunden-Skala statt der 24-Stunden-Skala benutzt (z.B. 10 Uhr statt 22 Uhr Zubettgehzeit angegeben). Wo die Plausibilitäsprüfung eine solche Fehlangabe dringend nahelegt, wurde sie korrigiert. In der Variable a_bettzeit_plausi ist die Information abgelegt, ob eine solche Korrektur vorgenommen wurde.

4.27.1.2 2. preferred bedtimes

Die Frage nach der präferierten Zubettgeh- bzw. Aufstehzeit ist orientiert an den ersten beiden Fragen des Morningness-Eveningnesss-Questionnnaires (MEQ) [Griefahn et al. (2001). Zur Validität der deutschen Übersetzung des Morningness-Eveningness-Questionnaires von Horne und Östberg. Somnologie 5: 71-80]. Da die Itemformulierungen und Antwortformate der Items d_schl12_2 und d_schl12_1 denen der gewöhnlichen Zubettgeh- bzw. Aufstehzeit (d_schl1, d_schl5) entsprechen, wurden für die Qualitätssicherung identische Verfahren und Plausibilitätschranken gewählt. Dadurch ist eine direkte Vergleichbarkeit der Angaben zu gewöhnlichen (faktischen) und präferierten (hypothetischen) Zeiten gegeben. Die unter „Gewöhnliche Bettzeiten" gemachten Anmerkungen gelten entsprechend.

4.27.1.3 3. insomnia

(1) Die Itemformulierungen entsprechen weitgehend dem Pitsburgh Sleep Quality Index (PSQI). Da nicht alle PSQI-Items integriert sind, ist der PSQI-Summenscore selbst nicht ermittelbar. Unterschiedliche Aspekte des Nachtschafs werden jedoch durch Variablen abgebildet, die Einzelitems bzw. einzelnen PSQI-Komponenten entsprechen. (2) In einem quantitativen Score wird aus den drei PSQI-Variablen, die die drei wesentlichen Formen insomnischer Beschwerden erfassen (Einschlafstörungen, Durchschlafstörungen, frühzeitiges Erwachen), durch Summenbildung ein 10-stufiger Gesamtwert gebildet (0-9). (3) Eine kategoriale Variable erfasst schlechte Schafqualität bzw. Insomnie in Anlehnung an die Definitionen der DEGS1 [Schlack et al. (2013). Häufigkeit und Verteilung von Schlafproblemen und Insomnie in der deutschen Erwachsenenbevölkerung: Ergebnisse der Studie zur Gesundheit Erwachsener in Deutschland (DEGS1). Bundesgesundheitsblatt Gesundheitsforschung Gesundheitsschutz 56: 740-748]. Schlechte Schlafqualität definierten wir als die Angabe von Einschlafstörungen oder Durchschlafstörungen oder Früherwachen jeweils mindestens dreimal pro Woche in Kombination mit der Angabe einer ziemlich schlechten oder sehr schlechten Schlafqualität. Für die Ausprägung „Insomnie" ist zusätzlich die Angabe einer Tagesbeeinträchtigung zu fordern, operationalisiert über die Komponente 7 des PSQI (d_schl7, d_schl8).

4.27.1.4 4. respiration

(1) Die Fragen zu Atemstillständen und Schnarchen sind am Berlin-Fragebogen zur Einschätzung des Risikos eines obstruktiven Schlaf-Apnoe-Syndroms orientiert [Netzer et al. (1999). Using the Berlin Questionnaire to identify patients at risk for the sleep apnea syndrome. Ann Intern Med 131: 485-491]. Allerdings sind nicht alle Fragen Berlin-Fragebogens berücksichtigt, die Antwortkategorien weichen leicht ab. Auf die Berechnung eines Scores wurde deshalb verzichtet. (2) Da das originale Antwortformat auch sehr geringe Ereignishäufigkeiten von fraglicher klinischer Relevanz erfasst, wurden unter Verwendung der Cut-offs des Berlin-Fragebogens dichotome Variablen berechnet, die bevorzugt zur Verwendung empfohlen werden. (3) Bei der Variable d_schl9 „Schnarchen" wurde (anders als bei den übrigen Variablen des Touchscreen-Moduls Schlafgewohnheiten) eine Kategorie „Weiß nicht" explizit zur Auswahl angeboten und von ca. 1/5 der Probanden gewählt. Da bei den dichotomen Variablen die Weiß-nicht-Kategorie je nach Auswertungszweck als Missing eingeordnet

5.2 Nutrition

Type	Project
Superordinate	other questionnaires, p. 1297 (Program)
Title	Nutrition
Name	Nutrition
Description	As part of the baseline examination of the NAKO Health Study (01.01.2014 to 30.09.2019), the nutrition module consisting of the nutrition questionnaires sv24 (24h food list, 24h-FL) and FFQ (food frequency questionnaire) was established as a level 1 module and continued in the second examination (01.10.2019 to 08.2024). The nutrition questionnaires were provided by the German Institute of Human Nutrition and offered to the study participants for completion. The questionnaires could be completed digitally or, if desired, as a paper version. The sv24 serves as a repeated survey on the previous day's diet (Freese et al. 2014). This is a simplified survey of the consumption/non-consumption without portion information of certain food and dietary supplements. The FFQ is an instrument that asks about food consumption in the last 12 months. In particular, it asks about the frequency of food consumption. At the beginning of the baseline examination, at least 2 (voluntarily up to 4) independent sv24 and one FFQ should be collected from each study participant. In the course of the baseline examination, it was determined that participation in the nutrition module was low, and it was therefore decided that missing nutrition questionnaires should be completed in the second examination. In this context, the importance of the dietary survey was also reaffirmed and the SOP was amended to the effect that 4 independent sv24 and 1 FFQ should be collected together in the first and second examination. The aim of the nutrition module is to estimate the usual diet of the study participants in order to characterise them according to their food intake and to investigate the health effects of food and nutrient intake. In addition, the derivation of further parameters such as calorie intake and sugar, salt or fat intake from certain food (sub)groups is planned.
Subordinate	Derived variables nutrient intake, p. 1305, Derived variables food consumption, p. 1349, Derived variables FFQ Nutrintake, p. 1384, Derived variables FFQ LM_eingeschraenkt, p. 1440, Derived variables FFQ Nondietary_data, p. 1457, Derived variables FFQ Nutrintake_by_group, p. 1479, Derived variables FFQ/ SV24 nutrition info, p. 1542, Nutritional data ffq2, p. 1556

5.2.1 Derived variables nutrient intake

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Nutrition, p. 1305 (Project)
Name	Derived variables nutrient intake
Title	Derived variables nutrient intake
Description	Derived variables dietary nutrient intake calculated from SV24 & FFQ2 of QA reports NAKO-492 (DF200k), NAKO-113 (DF100k) and NAKO-939 (U2 and baseline DF200k). For a more comprehensive data set calculated from FFQ2, see Derived Variables Nutriintake. The quality report on the nutrition module includes data from 204,706 study participants who took part in the nutrition survey during the baseline survey of the NAKO Health Study and during the second examination. Due to the possibility of completing further sv24s and the FFQ during the second examination in order to obtain 4 completed sv24s and a completed FFQ, 4 sv24s and an FFQ are now available for 71,569 participants instead of just 22,472 participants. For 152,304 people, 1 FFQ and at least 1 sv24 are available. Based on the methodology used, data on usual intake and nutrients consumed can be estimated for 152,304 participants who completed at least one sv24 and one FFQ. Although nutrition was a level 1 module in which all study participants were required to take part, only 74% of the data were usable for scientific analyses. On the other hand, it was found that when a nutrition questionnaire was started, it was often completed in full, so missing and inconsistent information was a minor problem. There were no significant differences in the completion status between the sv24 and the FFQ. There were no gender-specific differences in the completeness of completion. However, it was observed that study participants with a lower level of education and a higher body mass index achieved a lower level of completeness. Overall, there was sufficient data available to estimate the usual intake and the nutrients consumed. This information was returned to the ZDM for 152,304 participants with at least one usable sv24 and one FFQ and can now be applied for scientific analyses. In addition, information is provided for each participant on how many usable sv24s and whether a usable FFQ was available. This allows users of usual consumption to perform sensitivity analyses and decide what requirements for available data they place on participants in order to include them.

5.2.2 Derived variables food consumption

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Nutrition, p. 1305 (Project)
Name	Derived variables food consumption
Title	Derived variables food consumption
Description	Derived variables nutrition-usual food consumption according to the QA reports NAKO-492 (DF200k), NAKO-113 (DF100k) and NAKO-939 (U2 and baseline DF200k). Calculated from information in FFQ and SV24 questionnaires. The quality report on the nutrition module includes data from 204,706 study participants who took part in the nutrition survey during the baseline survey of the NAKO Health Study and during the second examination. Due to the possibility of completing additional sv24 and the FFQ during the second examination in order to obtain 4 completed sv24 and one completed FFQ, 4 sv24 and one FFQ are now available for 71,569 participants instead of only 22,472 participants. 1 FFQ and at least 1 sv24 are available for 152,304 people. Based on the methodology used, data on usual diet and nutrient intake can be estimated for 152,304 participants who completed at least one sv24 and one FFQ. Although nutrition was a level 1 module in which all study participants were required to take part, only 74% of the data were usable for scientific analyses. On the other hand, it was found that when a nutrition questionnaire was started, it was often completed in full, so missing and inconsistent information was a minor problem. There were no significant differences in the completion status between the sv24 and the FFQ. There were no gender-specific differences in the completeness of completion. However, it was observed that study participants with a lower level of education and a higher body mass index achieved a lower level of completeness. Overall, there was sufficient data available to estimate the usual intake and the nutrients consumed. This information was returned to the ZDM for 152,304 participants with at least one usable sv24 and one FFQ and can now be applied for scientific analyses. In addition, information is provided for each participant on how many usable sv24 and whether a usable FFQ was available. This allows users of usual consumption to perform sensitivity analyses and decide what requirements for available data they place on participants in order to include them.

5.2.7 Derived variables FFQ/ SV24 nutrition info

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Nutrition, p. 1305 (Project)
Name	Derived variables FFQ/ SV24 nutrition info
Title	Derived variables nutrition info
Description	Derived Nutrition Information variables include: a) Error status variables calculated from the data of the EPIC-Potsdam Food Frequency Questionnaire 2 (FFQ2) (NAKO-968). b) Information on completion time, participant identification, duration of data collection, number of completed SV24 questionnaires, and the interval to the baseline examination, calculated from the information provided in the FFQ2 and SV24 questionnaires (which were completed to at least 70%). The quality report for the nutrition module includes data from 204,706 study participants who took part in the dietary assessment during the baseline examination of the NAKO Health Study and during the second follow-up examination. Due to the possibility of completing additional SV24 questionnaires and the FFQ during the second follow-up examination, with the aim of obtaining up to four completed SV24 questionnaires and one completed FFQ, complete data are now available for 71,569 participants instead of only 22,472 participants. For 152,304 individuals, one FFQ and at least one SV24 are available. Based on the methodology applied, data on habitual dietary intake and nutrient intake can be estimated for 152,304 participants who completed at least one SV24 and one FFQ. Although nutrition was a level-1 module in which all study participants were supposed to take part, usable data for scientific analyses are available for only 74% of participants. On the other hand, it was observed that once participants started completing a dietary questionnaire, it was often completed in full; missing and contradictory information therefore represents a secondary issue. No substantial differences in completion status were observed between the SV24 and the FFQ. No sex-specific differences in completeness of completion were identified. However, participants with a lower level of education and a higher body mass index showed lower completeness. Overall, sufficient data were available to estimate habitual dietary intake and nutrient intake. This information has been returned to the ZDM for 152,304 participants with at least one usable SV24 and one FFQ and can now be requested for scientific analyses (status: February 2025). In addition, information is provided for each participant on how many usable SV24 questionnaires were available and whether a usable FFQ was available. This allows users of habitual intake data to perform sensitivity analyses and to decide which requirements regarding available data they impose on participants in order to include them

5.3.1.1 Questionnaire on physical activity in the past 12 months

The QUAP questionnaire provides comprehensive information to characterise the seasonal variation of physical activity by capturing the seasonal variation of activity through an extended time perspective of 12 months. It represents the different domains of physical activity well according to the existing literature and thus extends the other modules for recording physical activity in the NAKO Health Study. When analysing the data, it should be noted that approximately 1% of the numerical values were read incorrectly during the automatic reading and verification of the questionnaires and have not yet been corrected. A conservative approach was taken when adjusting the data in order to underestimate rather than overestimate activity times and intensity levels.

Bitte geben Sie die beiden Sportarten an, die Sie in den vergangenen 12 Monaten am häufigsten betrieben haben. Für die Datenbereinigung wurden folgende Annahmen getroffen: Wenn mindestens ein Wert für saisonal variierende Sportaktivität eingetragen wurde, wurden fehlende Angaben durch den Wert für "über 12 Monate" (falls vorhanden) ersetzt, andernfalls durch "0". Bei Konflikten zwischen den Angaben für "über 12 Monate gleichbleibend" und "saisonal verschieden" wurden die Angaben zu "saisonal verschieden" verwendet. Freitextangaben zur Sportart wurden soweit wie möglich nachcodiert. Auf Grundlage der genannten Sportart und der berichteten körperlichen Anstrengungen konnte nach Ainsworth (2011) das metabolische Äquivalent (MET) berechnet werden.

7.1.1 Abdominal fat ultrasound

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Abdominal fat ultrasound, p. 1879 (Project)
Name	Abdominal fat ultrasound
Title	Evaluation variables abdominal fat ultrasound

Description	Evaluation variables abdominal fat ultrasound. Mean values, which can be used for analyses, were calculated from the duplicate measured values of the SAT and VAT, adjusted according to QS report NAKO-414. These mean values were distributed slightly skewed to the right for men and women. On average, the SAT was slightly lower in men than in women (2.0 cm vs. 2.3 cm), while the VAT was significantly more pronounced (7.4 cm vs. 5.5 cm). Age-stratified percentiles showed that the SAT increased continuously with increasing age in women, while it reached a maximum in middle age in men. VAT increased steadily with age in both sexes. The reproducibility of the measured values when measured twice by one examiner was determined using an intraclass correlation coefficient (ICC). The ICC was above 0.9 for all examiners for both the SAT and VAT measurements, which is why excellent intra-observer reliability can be assumed. The comparison of the mean values of the individual study centres showed large regional differences for both the SAT and the VAT. This observation could be based on a cluster effect, as has also been observed with other measurements such as BMI. In order to check the validity of the measurement, a random sample of the images of each examiner with at least 50 examinations was evaluated as part of the DF100k (QA of the first approx. 100,000 baseline examinations) using a quality score for measurement accuracy and image quality and the respective proportion of correctly performed SAT and VAT measurements was assigned as additional variables to all examinations performed by this examiner.

7.1.2 Abdominal ultrasound

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Abdominal fat ultrasound, p. 1879 (Project)
Name	Abdominal ultrasound
Title	Ultrasound examination of the abdomen
Description	Ultrasound examination of the abdomen. In 350 cases, the ultrasound images were remeasured due to implausible measurements or incorrectly recognised target structures. Further corrections were made on the basis of the available examination comments. The proportion of missing measurements was 7% overall, although there were large differences between the study centres. Mean values that can be used for analyses were calculated from the adjusted, duplicate measured values of the SAT and VAT. These are shown in abg_usa.

7.2.2 AGE-Reader Completion

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	AGE-Reader, p. 1890 (Project)
Name	AGE-Reader Completion
Title	-
Description	AGE reader completion. The following anomalies were identified when checking the AGE reader data of the 100k datafreeze: Despite the calibration measures, there are obviously device effects that were noticeable when comparing the mean autofluorescence (AF) of the SCs and were confirmed by testing in SCs with more than one AGE reader (Neubrandenburg and Augsburg). There were some significant differences between the individual measuring devices (difference of 0.06 in Neubrandenburg and 0.24 in Augsburg). The device effects can be taken into account, for example, by using device-specific z-standardised AF values in evaluations. When analysing centre differences, the device effect cannot be distinguished from the centre effect, which is why we do not recommend publishing such analyses. In addition, several devices were temporarily used as surrogate devices in different centres. Furthermore, a peak in the mean AF values is noticeable at the beginning of the baseline study, which was obviously caused in particular by increased measured values in the Berlin-Nord centre in the months of August to November 2014, which should be excluded from analyses if necessary. Implausible AFR measured values of 0 or >10 were observed for 15 cases. These were identified by a corresponding comment and the status 12 (SOP-compliant completed, missing values).

7.3.3 MVPA

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Accelerometry, p. 1905 (Project)
Name	MVPA
Title	Time spent in moderate to vigorous activity (MVPA)
Description	Estimates of time (in minutes per day, averaged over available days as appropriate) spent in MVPA based on various algorithm parameters, including: epoch length, bout duration criteria and acceleration threshold. Epochs above a certain acceleration measure (ENMO or MAD) threshold were categorised as MVPA. Studies that can be used to select an (age specific) MVPA threshold include e.g., Hildebrand 2014/2016: adults (21-61 years), ActiGraph, hip, ENMO: Light: 47.4 mg, Moderate: 69.1 mg, Vigorous: 258.7 mg; Sanders 2019: older adults (60-68 years), ActiGraph, hip, ENMO: Light 6/15 mg, Moderate 19/69 mg; Migueles 2021: older adults (?70 years), ActiGraph, hip, ENMO: Light 7 mg, Moderate 14 mg; Vähä-Ypyä 2015: adults (35 +/- 11 years), Hookie AM20, hip, MAD: Moderate: 91 mg, Vigorous: 414 mg. Caution: The MVPA concept has various problems (see also publication). We therefore recommend the use of ENMO and MAD. Should MVPA nevertheless have to be used for certain applications, one could consider using time spent in MVPA based on a 1-minute epoch without bout detection while varying the threshold. Check aksum_invalid and aksum_insuffwt for particpants to be excluded from analyses.

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Echocardiography, p. 1993 (Project)
Name	Measurement results echocardiography
Title	-
Description	Results of the manual reading of the 3D echocardiography image data. Missing values are generally due to insufficient quality or incorrect collection of the image data. The proportion of examinations in which all 8 measured values are missing is less than 1%, as is the proportion of examinations in which all 8 measured values are present. For technical reasons, it was not possible to collect the 3D variables at the beginning of the reading. The analysis of the extreme values of the various variables by gender, age or examiner did not reveal any indications of implausible or obviously incorrect, erroneous data.

7.7.3 Ergometry evaluation

Type	Examination (unit)
Superordinate	Physical fitness, p. 1999 (Project)

Name	Ergometry evaluation
Title	Ergometry results
Description	Results of the bicycle ergometry examination, adjusted according to QA report NAKO-432. The bicycle ergometry was carried out in the baseline as a "1 out of 3 examination level 2", i.e. mainly in the study centres Regensburg, Halle, Bremen, Mannheim, Saarbrücken and Berlin South. A total of approx. 8,900 valid measurements of the heart rate-related parameters of cardiorespiratory fitness are available for the baseline study (a_erg_done=1 and a_erg_hr_excl=0).

7.7.3.1 Evaluation variables

The basis for the HR-related performance parameters is the adjusted mean heart rate (HR) at the end of each exercise stage. The HR-related performance parameters were calculated using the physical work capacity (PWC) principle on the one hand and the estimated maximum oxygen uptake (VO2max) on the other. The PWC principle is used to determine the power output when a defined HR threshold is exceeded. Relative HR thresholds are particularly suitable here, as they allow the age-related decline in HR to be taken into account. The PWC 75% (variable a_erg_pwc75 or a_erg_pwc75_kg) indicates the power output (in W or W/kg) of a participant when he or she reaches 75% of his or her own maximum heart rate. The PWC130 (variable a_erg_pwc130p or a_erg_pwc130p_kg) indicates the power a participant produces when he or she reaches an HR of 130/min. The VO2max (variable a_erg_vo2_max) was calculated in two stages: first, the maximum power (in W) was estimated using linear regression (variable a_erg_wm_kg) based on the observed HR increase over the exercise levels and the age-based maximum heart rate limit according to Tanaka (208 - 0.7 x basis_age). The VO2max was calculated from the estimated maximum performance using the formula of the American College of Sports Medicine: VO2max= 33.5 + 12.24 x wattmax_kg.

7.11.1.1 Neuropsychological test battery

The neuropsychological test battery comprises 6 individual tests, four of which were taken from the CERAD_Plus test battery (Morris JC 1989). The module-specific results test showed the expected results. Women performed better than men in all tests, younger people performed better than older people in numerous tests and test subjects with a higher level of education performed better than those with a shorter period of education. Furthermore, German language skills (see variable a_ses_deutsch) had a strong influence on all test results.

7.11.1.1.1 Test 1: Animal names

The neuropsychological test battery comprises 6 individual tests, four of which were taken from the CERAD_Plus test battery (Morris JC 1989). The module-specific results test showed the expected results. Women performed better than men in all tests, younger people performed better than older people in numerous tests and test subjects with a higher level of education performed better than those with a shorter period of education. Furthermore, German language skills (see variable a_ses_deutsch) had a strong influence on all test results.

7.11.1.1.2 Test 2: Word list

Test of verbal learning and memorisation skills. The respondent is asked to memorise a list of 12 words, which is first played twice in succession (immediate recall). After each presentation of the word list, the respondent is asked to name all the words that he/she has memorised within 60 seconds. After test 4, the respondent is asked to freely name all the memorised words within 60 seconds without playing them again (delayed recall). 10 of the 12 words represent the word list of the CERAD-Plus neuropsychological test battery. This list was supplemented by 2 terms that have the same word frequency in the German language as the 10 in order to avoid ceiling effects in younger participants.

7.11.1.1.3 Test 3: Colour-word interference test (Stroop test)

Multidimensional performance test that measures elementary information processing skills (executive skills). It aims to process conflicting information and to measure the "response conflict" or the "lack of response inhibition" or the "lack of selective attention". It is therefore also a measure of "concentration effectiveness" or distractibility. Only Scales 2 and 3 are used in the NAKO Health Study. The proband is instructed to name the print colour of the box or the colour words in both sheets. In the interference condition of the test (panel 3), the print colour and colour word do not match.

A subtest of the Hamburg-Wechsler-test for adults, which is designed to measure working memory performance and thus immediate verbal recall. The proband is given a series of numbers to repeat backwards. Starting with two numbers, the number of numbers in a row increases until correct reproduction is no longer possible in two attempts (maximum of 9 numbers in a row).

7.11.1.1.6 Test 6: Number sequence test

The ZRT can be seen as a proxy for a comprehensive assessment of fluid intelligence. It requires the completion of a series of numbers by inductively recognising and applying a set of rules. A block-adaptive version with six items based on the Woodcock-Johnson III (WJ-III) test was used. The reliability of the estimation of the ability parameters must be regarded as limited due to the brevity of the ZRT used in comparison to the reliabilities achieved with the time-consuming task batteries usually used in intelligence testing.

7.11.1.1.8 domain scores

The individual test results of the neuropsychological test battery can be summarised in two cognitive domains, memory and executive function, using factor analysis. The mean value of both domains results in a global cognition factor.

7.11.1.1.8.1 Domain score memory

Type	Variable
Superordinate	Neuropsychological test battery, p. 2114 (Examination)
In subsection 2	Neuropsychological test battery
In subsection 1	domain scores
Title	Domain score memory

Description	Memory function factor score derived from variables a_npsy_sumts2_1, a_npsy_sumts2_2, and a_npsy_sumts2_3 according to Kleineidam et al. (2022; https://doi.org/10.1080/15622975.2021.2011408). Individuals with significant disturbances during neuropsychological testing or hearing problems, and scores calculated from fewer than two neuropsychological tests of memory function were excluded. Higher scores indicate higher cognitive function. Factor scores are standardized (Mean=0, SD=1), based on data from all individuals with available scores. Recommendation: Check for influence of German language proficiency during analyses (variable a_ses_deutsch; covariate adjustment and effect modification, for an example see https://doi.org/10.1080/15622975.2021.2011408). For re-estimated factor scores in the respective sample see variable a_npsy_mem_native

Title	Global cognitive factor (without subject exclusion)
Description	Global cognition factor score. Mean of a_npsy_mem_raw and a_npsy_exe_raw, without any recommended exclusions. Higher scores indicate higher cognitive function. Factor scores are standardized (Mean=0, SD=1), based on data from all individuals with available scores. Recommendation: Exclude individuals with significant disturbances during neuropsychological testing. Exclude factor scores calculated from fewer than two neuropsychological tests in memory and executive function. Check for influence of German language proficiency during analyses (variable a_ses_deutsch; covariate adjustment and effect modification, for an example see https://doi.org/10.1080/15622975.2021.2011408). Title	Global cognitive factor (German native speakers only)
Description	Global cognition factor score. Mean of a_npsy_mem_native and a_npsy_exe_native, restricted to German native speakers. Scores are not representative for the population in Germany but are less influenced by confounding effects of interindividual differences in language proficiency. Higher scores indicate higher cognitive function. Factor scores are standardized (Mean=0, SD=1), based on data from all individuals with available scores. Individuals with significant disturbances during neuropsychological testing have been set to missing. Description	Three-tiered cognitive group classification of individuals across the complete age range based on the global cognition factor score (a_npsy_glob). Age- and sex-adjusted cognitive quantiles were derived from quantile regression models fitted in the complete NAKO sample with available data. Individuals with significant disturbances during neuropsychological testing were excluded from both the model estimation and group classification.

Type	Variable
Superordinate	Neuropsychological test battery, p. 2114 (Examination)
In subsection 2	Neuropsychological test battery
In subsection 1	domain scores
Title	Cognitive group classification (only native German speakers aged 45 and over)
Description	Three-tiered cognitive group classification of German native speakers aged 45+ years. This categorization can be used when the derived categories are to be related to the likelihood of acquired cognitive impairment and underlying diseases (e.g., neurodegenerative conditions). Age-, sex- and years of education-adjusted normative data was derived quantile regression models fitted in the NAKO sample aged 45+ years, who met the following criteria: complete neuropsychological data (tests 1-4) available, no significant disturbance during neuropsychological testing, no acute symptoms of depression (PHQ-9 > 10) or anxiety (GAD-7 < 10) and no relevant neurological conditions (epilepsy, Parkinson's disease, stroke). The cognitive group algorithm incorporates two core criteria: 1) a performance below the age-, sex- and education-adjusted 3rd percentile in the memory or executive function factor scores for German native speakers (a_npsy_mem_native, a_npsy_exe_native); 2) a number of impaired tests (i.e., test performances below the age-, sex- and education-adjusted 16th percentile) scoring in the bottom 10% of the normative sample (see above for normative sample criteria). The latter criterion was met, if ≥5 out of 10 neuropsychological test indicators scored below the age-, sex- and education-adjusted 16th percentile. See the "Recommendations for the analyses of the neuropsychological testbattery in NAKO" for an extended explanation of the rationale behind these classifications.

7.14 SOMNOwatch

Type	Project
Superordinate	examinations, p. 1879 (Program)
Title	SOMNOwatch
Name	SOMNOwatch

Description	The SOMNOwatch module is used to record sleep parameters (including sleep disorders) and to record 24-hour long-term ECGs. The Somnowatch is placed on the wrist of the non-dominant arm for a measurement period of 24h. A single-channel ECG is recorded via three electrodes and the participant's respiratory flow is recorded via nasal cannulae during the sleep phase. The data from 3-axis accelerometry, ECG and respiratory flow are stored unfiltered at a high sampling rate (128 or 256 Hz) in a file in European Data Format (EDF). In addition, technical data of the measurement as well as an illumination intensity are recorded. In addition, the participants are asked to document in a sleep log the exact times for going to bed, the targeted falling asleep, waking up, getting up, taking a nap or non-wearing times. In the baseline, a response of 8.3% across all probands and 30.9% for the level 2 probands and a satisfactory quality of the data is achieved. The completeness of the three Somnowatch sub-signals is particularly positive. Within our quality criteria, the accelerometry measurements are 93.8% complete, the 24h long-term ECGs 90.2% complete and the nocturnal respiratory flow measurements 75.7% complete. The analysis of sleep-wake behaviour is performed on the basis of the accelerometry measurements. For scientific use, nine sleep parameters (largely plausible for 84.6% of the measurements) and several error/status variables were determined. An evaluation of the long-term ECGs and determination of the ECG and heart rate variability parameters has not yet taken place.
